Part IV, Section A, Line 1

In 2014, the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation supported 203 schools and colleges and 16 institutions that provide elderly care. The will that created the Foundation designates those supported organizations by class, restricting support to "established educational institutions of good standing" that provide "proper and adequate education to poor and deserving Christian girls" and "established hospitals or institutions for indigent Christian women" in nine southeastern states. No supported organizations are named in the Foundation's governing documents because the supported organizations are designated by class and the Foundation has maintained historic and continuing relationships with its supported organizations since it was created in 1953. Twenty-one of the supported organizations have received annual support since 1954 when the Foundation's grants program was limited only to institutions in Georgia, Virginia, and North Carolina. An additional forty-four institutions from Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Tennessee have received annual support since 1972 when the Foundation expanded its programs to those other states. Almost all supported organizations have received annual support from the Foundation for more than 20 years. The Internal Revenue Service recognized the significance of these historic and continuing relationships when it designated the Foundation as a 509(a)(3) supporting organization in 1991.

Part IV, Section A, Line 5a

One school was removed from the Foundation's scholarship program - Virginia Intermont College [EIN: 54-05059722] - because the school closed in 2014. Organizations are rarely removed from the Foundation's grants programs, and removal is based entirely on factors beyond the Foundation's independent control, e.g., the supported organization loses accreditation, ceases operations, requests termination, or refuses to confirm use of the funds in accordance with the law or with the terms of the will that created the Foundation.

Similarly, new organizations are rarely added to the Foundation's grants program and only after the Foundation's assets have grown to a level that can support an additional institution on a permanent basis while still growing support for existing supported organizations. Two schools were added to the Foundation's scholarship program: The University of Georgia Foundation [EIN: 58-6033837] and East Carolina University Medical and Health Sciences Foundation [EIN: 23-7138921]. Funds granted to the University of Georgia were reserved for general undergraduate scholarships for female college students. Funds granted to East Carolina University were reserved for female nursing students.

Changes in the educational landscape occasionally compel adding a school to the scholarship program to ensure that the overall set of supported institutions best represents the charitable class of beneficiaries the Foundation was created to serve. For instance, the Foundation's trustees may elect to add a high quality nursing program that did not exist when the Foundation was created.

The Foundation was created in accordance with the Will of Conkey P. Whitehead and has operated in accordance with the terms of that Will since it was funded in 1953. While the Will does not contain specific provisions governing the addition or removal of supported organizations, its clear directives as to the purposes of the Foundation effectively constrain the trustees in selecting new organizations. All organizations supported by the Foundation must meet the requirements established in the Will in that they must either 1) provide proper and adequate education through established educational institutions of good standing for poor and deserving Christian girls; or 2) provide proper and adequate care through established hospitals or institutions for indigent Christian women. The Will further limits the support to residents and institutions within the states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. Historically, the trustees have interpreted these provisions as directing them to maintain relatively constant or increasing support of a stable set of institutions that are especially likely to serve deserving Christian girls (or indigent Christian women, in the case of hospitals and other elderly care institutions) from the designated states because of their student demographics, scholarship programs, or education programs.

The process for adding a new organization typically begins with multiple written requests from an interested organization and is followed by meetings with the institutional leadership and site visits by Foundation staff and/or trustees. The Foundation also solicits input from its current supported organizations on similar programs and institutions that serve similar missions and are worthy of support. In addition, the Foundation conducts independent third-party research as part of its due diligence process, including reviews of resources such as the National Center for Education Statistics and NCLEX licensure exam scores for nursing schools. Other critical factors taken into consideration before supporting a new organization include the following:

Private Liberal Arts Colleges. Grants for scholarships are awarded to colleges and universities in one of nine southeastern states (Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia) serving women with demonstrated financial need. The Foundation considers Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) accredited schools with a demonstrated level of student financial need (through review of student costs, percentage of students receiving Pell grants, and student loan default rates), stable enrollment, financial health, strong graduation and retention rates, quality of the academic program, level of fundraising support, and strong institutional leadership.

Nursing and Allied Health Schools. Grants for scholarships are sometimes earmarked for specific academic programs like nursing or one of many allied health fields. The Foundation's commitment to nursing education may be largely attributed to its historical commitment to educating female students, a large concentration of which enrolled in nursing education in the first few decades of the Foundation's existence. The Foundation considers SACS accredited schools with a strong academic program, stable enrollment, financial health, strong graduation and retention rates, high NCLEX scores, demonstrated level of student financial need, and strong institutional leadership.

Secondary Schools. Grants for scholarships are awarded occasionally to exceptional private secondary schools in Virginia and North Carolina serving Christian women with demonstrated financial need. The Foundation considers SACS accredited schools with an excellent academic program, stable enrollment, financial health, demonstrated student financial need, and strong fundraising support from the school community.

Care for the Elderly. The Foundation considers accredited organizations that possess financial health, strong institutional leadership, a high quality of compassionate care, and demonstrated financial need among their resident population.

The process for adding institutions to the list of those supported by the Foundation has not changed since the Foundation received IRS approval to convert from a private foundation to a supporting organization in 1991 and was disclosed as part of that request.

Part IV, Section D, Line 3

Trustees of the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation serve as trustees or directors of several supported organizations. Through these overlapping relationships, Foundation trustees are sensitive to the supported organizations' particular financial needs, their schedules for making awards of financial aid, and their need to maintain a reliable, steadily growing stream of income from the Foundation. Foundation staff and trustees also meet regularly with executive and board leadership of each supported organization. Since January 1, 2014, Foundation staff have visited with leadership of more than 85 supported organizations.

During meetings with the supported organizations, Foundation staff and trustees discuss key issues impacting higher education and how the Foundation can be responsive to institutions as they face increasingly challenging operating environments. Over the past several years, two themes have dominated every conversation. First, all schools report growing demand for need-based financial aid. Second, all schools report a mounting tension between rising costs and declining resources. Public universities in recent years have reported rapidly declining state support for their institutions. Private colleges and universities report growing pressure to rein in tuition increases despite increasing costs. Most schools realize that—even with all other things being constant—the tension between rising costs and shrinking resources requires changes to their operating model. Foundation trustees actively consider what they learn in these meetings when investing Foundation assets and when making grant decisions.

Given the growing uncertainty in higher education, the Foundation's supported organizations consistently ask the Foundation for two things: 1) increases in grants to keep pace with rising costs and growing demand for financial aid, and 2) flexibility for each school to manage the scholarship program in a manner that most benefits that school and its students. The Foundation has shaped its support program to accommodate both.

Schools report steadily growing costs, so the Foundation maintains an investment portfolio designed to keep pace. The Foundation's investment portfolio is designed to produce reliable, steady growth in income. Over time that growth has exceeded the rate of inflation and kept close pace with the growth in college costs. This is a result of the Foundation's decision to maintain income-producing investments and to limit its payout to a level that will allow it to meet each year's rise in costs with a similar increase in funding.

Supported organizations often express thanks for the manner in which the Foundation has consistently increased its support over time. During the Great Recession, many supported organizations noted that the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation was their only growing source of private support.

Given the increased need for financial aid, Foundation staff and trustees typically ask representatives from the supported organizations for feedback on the scholarship program to ensure that the funds are awarded in a way that delivers the most beneficial impact to students. The scholarship program is designed to give institutions discretion in awarding scholarships so long as they meet the requirements outlined in the Will that created the Foundation. With this flexibility, some schools choose to award many small scholarships. For example, one Florida school received a grant of $138,000 in 2011-12 and provided scholarships to 80 students with an average award of $1,725. Other schools choose to award a few large scholarships. One Virginia school received $132,000 and provided scholarships to 12 students with an average award of $11,000. Schools express appreciation for this flexibility and for the annual increases in the scholarship funding, which allow the institutions to increase individual scholarship awards and/or serve additional students each year.

Part V, Section D, Line 8

The Foundation provided 10% or more of the total private financial aid raised by at least 103 of its supported organizations. This number represents only those schools who verified the percentage of total private financial aid raised; the actual number of schools to which the Foundation provided 10% or more of the total private financial aid budget was likely greater. Grants made to these schools comprise more than 45% of the Foundation's required distributions in 2014. In many instances, the Foundation provides more than 50% of a supported organization's total private financial aid budget.

For each supported organization, the loss of the Foundation's support would be a devastating blow to their respective financial aid programs - particularly at this time when schools report that attracting need-based financial aid is their top priority. Consequently, each school has a real and substantial interest in being attentive to the operations of the Foundation.

Treasury Regulations indicate that an organization's attentiveness should be determined not only in light of the total number of dollars provided but in light of the length of time over which support has been provided. In many other cases, private scholarship support is raised on an annual basis from various, episodic donors who may make one-time or infrequent gifts to a school. The Foundation's support, however, is far more significant to its supported organizations because unlike other sources of private funding, it can be counted on year after year, making the total value to the schools of maintaining a strong relationship with the Foundation that much greater.

In the current economic environment, the Foundation's supported organizations would not be able to replace a loss of the Foundation's funding and would likely need to reduce scholarship programs in that event. Reducing or eliminating grants is particularly devastating when those grants support scholarships because those scholarships usually entail four-year commitments. Current enrolled students receiving Lettie Pate Whitehead scholarships may have to withdraw from school if the Foundation terminates its funding. As a result, the supported organizations have a very real and vested interest in monitoring the activities of the Foundation and ensuring that its support continues.

Part V, Section B, Line 1e

The Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation's holdings of The Coca-Cola Company common stock was determined by Shearwater Valuation Associates, LLC to warrant a blockage factor of 2.14%. This was based on holdings of 26,680,000 shares as of December 31, 2012. The holdings as of December 31, 2014, are 26,530,000 shares, and since the decrease is insignificant, the 2.14% blockage factor has been applied.
